Pikes Peak United Way Launches Partnership with DoorDash to Serve Those in Need
Last Mile Delivery Program Provides Safe and Reliable Food Distribution

Colorado Springs, Colo. – Today, Pikes Peak United Way announced the launch of the Ride United Last Mile Delivery (RULMD) program, which was made possible through a partnership with DoorDash’s Project DASH. This program provides home delivery of food and essential supplies to those in need, which are especially valuable to seniors, neighbors with health issues, those struggling with transportation, and those suffering from the economic impact of COVID-19.

Through delivery drivers with DoorDash, known as Dashers, RULMD provides a safe and reliable way to get food to local households. These deliveries emphasize privacy and convenience in addition to relieving stress and lines at local food pantries. In 2021, DoorDash provided over 507,000 free food deliveries nationally. After seeing large-scale programmatic success among similar vulnerable populations, Pikes Peak United Way 211 partnered with DoorDash to bring the program to Colorado Springs.

“We could not be more thankful for the opportunity to partner with DoorDash through the Ride United Last Mile Delivery Program,” said Cindy Aubrey, Pikes Peak United Way President and CEO. “This unique collaboration allows us to help address hunger and complex community challenges in our community. We can better reach members of our community who need support and help alleviate the stress that many food pantries are currently experiencing at the same time.”

“We are honored to partner with Pikes Peak United Way to broaden food access in Colorado Springs,” said Brittany Graunke, DoorDash Drive Director of Government and Nonprofit. “Local delivery has been critical in supporting food banks and food pantries provision of food and other essentials while emphasizing convenience and dignity. We’re excited to continue growing this work in a sustainable way for our food bank and food pantry partners across the country to continue to meet the ongoing need.”

Ride United, a United Way transportation access program, expanded to include deliveries of food and essential items during the pandemic, forming the Last Mile Delivery program. Locally, the Pikes Peak United Way 211 team responded to nearly 36,000 calls in 2021, at least 1,400 calls where the primary request was food. Food donations for Last Mile Delivery are provided by Care and Share foodbank.
